Hi Bill,
Thanks, I will move forward with the changes being documented into the FCR.

Tanya,
I'm sort of neutral here, meaning either way is fine with me. Although I would favor the FCR slightly to be consistent with what they are already doing, that is, documenting any changes prior to field work.

Hi Bill,
I received the following FCR from ARCADIS. My initial review is that the change does not require a FCR. However, the change (the equipment used and why) should be documented in the field log book. Please review and let me know your thought.
Thanks,
Tanya

Tanya,
We have modified FCR-06 (previously approved on April 27, 2015) to include the use of the alternative well installation method for MW-12. We need to access MW-12 by crossing potential bog turtle habitat. In our discussions with USFWS, they have restricted the use of heavy equipment in these areas. As such, we likely cannot access MW-12 using the geoprobe.
We left the FCR in track changes so you can see the changes that have been made. Only the text was revised; however, I have included the table and figure for completeness.
Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks,
Suzy
